LADY MANAGERS BEAT DIRECTORS AT DIPLOMACY

When Request to Elect Mrs. Davis President Was Made Board Elected Mrs. Manning, Asking National Commission to Add St. Louis Member

MRS. MOORE MENTIONED FOR BOARD MEMBERSHIP

Miss Egan Is Chosen Secretary and Adjournment Is Likely to Come Before Any New Member Is Added to Their Number

The question of electing a St. Louis woman to membership in the board of lady managers to succeed Mrs. James L. Blair has developed a decided difference of opinion between the World's Fair corporation and the national commission.

The World's Fair officials thought a St. Louis woman should be made president of the board in place of Mrs. Blair.

The national commission held that the board of lady managers should decide for themselves whether they preferred their new president from St. Louis or elsewhere.

Mrs. Daniel Manning of New York has been elected president and no St. Louis woman has been added to the board.

Now the Post-Dispatch is informed that in all probability no St. Louis woman will be added to the board, at least at the present session of the national commission.

Two members of the World's Fair directory furnish this information. One said it was his positive impression that no St. Louis woman will be added. The other added the qualifying clause concerning the present meeting.

Said the latter:

"A St. Louis woman would have been added to the board by the national commission at the beginning of the present week, had it not been for the unusual language in which the request from the World's Fair corporation was couched.

Request Was Made Specific

"When the national commission received it, the request was that Mrs. John T. Davis be made president of the board in place of Mrs. Blair.

"In reply, the national commission said it was not their place to elect the president of the board of lady managers. The law provided that they choose the members of the board and not the president of the board of lady managers.

"As I understand it, the World's Fair officials, or maybe it was only one official, drafted to me the request that Mrs. Davis be made president.

"Then the national commission decided to notify the World's Fair corporation that it would be good enough for any woman to be a member of the board, who would have as a member of the board.

"The board met from day to day, but no name was recommended.

"It seems that the motto of the World's Fair officials was 'Mrs. John T. Davis for president or no St. Louis woman for a member.'

Meanwhile the ladies of the board got together and elected Mrs. Manning.

"She was chosen 'unanimously' by a friendly member of the World's Fair organization.

When they found they had enough votes to elect Mrs. Manning, they did so.

At the same time the board, adopting a resolution requesting the appointment of a St. Louis woman on the board.

The directors of the Fair were not consulted.

"Some of them have ideas on the subject and names they may wish to present. So it is likely that there will be more than one name mentioned to the national commission at its next session."

Whether the national commission will understand that the board of lady managers from St. Louis is another question.

"It is said that certain members of the commission would like to see Mrs. Philip N. Moore as president of the St. Louis members of the board of lady managers.

She was a leading candidate against Mrs. Blair for the place two years ago.

At that time the members of the commission gave her the qualifications of Mrs. Moore, and were very much interested in her.

Mrs. Moore has been president of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, and is widely prominent in women's work.

MISS LAVINIA EGAN BOARD'S NEW SECRETARY

The Board of Lady Managers of the World's Fair Friday morning accepted the resignation of Mrs. Frederick Hanner of Little Rock as secretary of the board, and unanimously elected Miss Lavinia Egan of Shreveport, La., to succeed her.

Miss Egan will receive a salary as secretary, and will be responsible in St. Louis during the fair. She will not be allowed a stenographer or an assistant secretary to succeed Mrs. Benjamin Hanner.

The new secretary, who is the salary she is to receive has not been determined upon.

Miss Egan, who has been a member of the board since its organization, is a newspaper woman of Shreveport.

While there is some doubt whether the board will be able to complete its work for adjournment Friday night, it is said that the members of the board, and her party started East Thursday night. Mrs. Richard, W. Knott of Kentucky, left last night. Mrs. John Holcomb of Hartford, Conn., and several others have arranged to leave Friday night.

The amount of money appropriated for an appropriation of $100,000 as the independent fund of the board, as related in the last edition of the Post-Dispatch, will be settled before adjournment.

It is expected that Mrs. Manning will appoint a committee, including the four members of the board, who will go to Washington soon after the holidays to seek the appropriation.

The board will secure such an appropriation, which will be largely used as an entertainment fund.

President Thomas H. Carter of the national commission addressed the board on the scope of duties of the board. The address was delivered in executive session. President Carter did not say a word to the members, but simply to come to an understanding.

Matron Weighing 165 Pounds Takes Watch From Pockets of Captive Who Is Thirty Pounds Lighter—Says He Had No Chance

When Mrs. Anna Lendlis of 258 Florida street and her son, Mr. Louis Werner, of 2504 Palm street, went to the spare bedroom in Mrs. Lendlis' home to hide Christmas presents for a child under the bed and saw a man's foot protruding, they did not scream, but dropped their packages and each grabbed a foot.

The man, out in plain view, Mrs. Lendlis sat down on him as hard as her 165 pounds would allow, and Mrs. Werner ran for a policeman.

She found two policemen on the next block, and they took the burglar to the North Market street station, where he registered as Patrick Collins of New York.

Collins, according to the policeman, Mrs. Lendlis searched the pockets of the intruder and recovered $12 belonging to her husband, William Lendlis, and a gold watch belonging to her son.

Connell admits that he had been in the house for some time and had visited several rooms, getting the money from Mr. Lendlis' room and the watch and chain from another room, which Mrs. Lendlis says is occupied by her son.

Connell contends that this was his first attempt at burglary, but from his familiarity with police methods, it is thought he is an old offender. He is of slight build, not weighing over 125 pounds, and said he had no chance after Mrs. Lendlis sat upon him.

Funerals Stopped BY DRIVERS' STRIKE

Extraordinary Condition Follows the Walkout of 1600 Stable Employees in Chicago

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—Sixteen hundred livery drivers, backed by every teamsters' union in Chicago, struck today. Nearly 400 livery stables are completely tied up. The decision to strike was reached last night after hours of negotiations between drivers and working conditions. The strike was to begin at the present time.

By this time the stranger was at the rear end of the bar, walking toward the telephone. The other man remained at the front end of the bar. Jones was directing the stranger to the phone.

"Anything to drink?" began the bartender, turning toward the man at the front. He didn't finish, for his gaze fell on a glowing revolver in the outstretched hand of a strong man. Then he turned again and another revolver confronted him.

Did Police Know?

Jones was helpless between two fires. He dared not reach for his own revolver.

Quick work the visitors made. Looking into the barrel of one revolver, and with the other behind him, the bartender obeyed the commands, walked to the big icebox at the rear of the room, opened the heavy door, and got inside. Then he heard it locked on the outside.

DID DOCKERY CAUSE HAWES TO STEP DOWN?

Story Is Current Out in the State That the President of the St. Louis Police Board Became "Miffed" at the Governor

LATTER WANTED ATTACKS ON ATTORNEY FOLK TO CEASE

Angered by Dockery's "Interference," It Is Said, Hawes Forwarded His Resignation, Causing Friction in the Machine

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
LIBERTY, Mo., Dec. 18.—According to reports here there is no doubt that Harry Hawes' quick resignation was due to Gov. Dockery's disapproval of a man serving under his administration attacking Circuit Attorney Folk of St. Louis. It is not thought that the Governor demanded Hawes' resignation, but that in urging Hawes to stop the latter got "winded" and telegraphed in his resignation. Hawes may have expected to resign anyhow and run for governor, but not at the time he did. In his speech at Moberly, in speaking of the gubernatorial contest, Gov. Dockery said:

"I give you my word for it, I will keep hands off."

Country Democrats who are for Folk have been demanding that Dockery make good this promise and saying that if he is really in earnest, to stop Hawes and other appointees under the Governor's administration in their attacks on Folk. Dockery was held responsible and he is being condemned by Folk's supporters now for making his word good, as they believe he has done in calling Hawes down. In justice to the Governor, it is also stated that he had a talk with him on the first interview Hawes had after his return from Europe criticizing Folk.

According to the resignation story, Dockery tried to prevail upon Hawes to cease his attacks when Hawes spoke at Jefferson City, Dec. 12, that Hawes went on to Joplin and made even a more bitter attack on the St. Louis prosecutor. The crisis came when Hawes returned to St. Louis.

There is a feeling among country Folk that the state machine, so far as Dockery is concerned, will not oppose Folk in his contention of his own political future. Dockery sees that the Folk sentiment in the state is so strong that it is dangerous for him to do so, even if the machine has the power to defeat Folk.

gulf for a month past, conducting defensive and preparatory operations.

The protest reads partly as follows:

"To the Captain of the Atlanta:

"Daniel Ortiz, commanding general of a division of the Colombian army and adjutant to Gen. Reyes, protests most energetically in the name of the Colombian government, and all Colombians against the invasion of American territory in our waters. You are citizens of a powerful country, immensely rich and possessing many natural resources. On the contrary we are bankrupt and our territories are depopulated. Colombia has been bled by fatuous civil wars; but to defend ourselves, we believe we have right and justice on our side. Do not doubt it. The God of nations will be on our side."

"Again, him square, every man shall not prevail. Every Colombian, man or woman, is capable of rising to D. ORTIZ."

The Colombians, carefully and systematically made efforts to avoid furnishing any information as to what purposes had been in view in their attacks, but had been building a road toward the republic of Panama. But it can be said that they are awaiting superior orders. In the meantime, there is strong probability that they are building a road toward Panama. The distance separating Tumamati and Yavine is 100 miles.

The Colombians declared they had 200 men between the mouth of the Atrato and Tiburon, well supplied with food, clothing and arms, and had a battery of 12 pieces of artillery mounted advantageously at coast points. Their demeanor, though polite, is very stern and hostile and deep chagrin at having been taken by surprise. Many indications pointed to their intention of bringing more men and supplies to the gulf.

Deserter Salutes When He Sees Shoulder Straps and Police Captain Does the Rest

George Oliver's naval ship training got him into trouble and then into the police station. As a mechanic of the second class he had learned the important lesson that whenever he saw shoulder straps he must stand straight, bring his heels to together, bring his open hand to his cap, and stand at salute.

This was what he did when he saw Police Capt. Young standing at Branch and Arsenal streets, waiting for a car. When the captain answered the salute Oliver quickly realized how he could reach a certain street.

"When did you desert?" asked Capt. Young.
"Thunder, how did you know I was a deserter?" asked Oliver.

But he went with the captain and confirmed that a companion had gone ashore at Mare Island, overstayed their leave and then, afraid to go back, fled.

This was in December.

Oliver says he has been in St. Louis several months, and that he was robbed of $40 by highwaymen on the Twelfth street bridge, and $100 by a co.

He says his home is at Tallahassee, Fla. He is held for the naval authorities.

WOMAN WITH RARE JEWELS THREATENED

Mysterious Letters Declare Diamonds Will Be Stolen and She Will Be Harmed.

SUSPECT ARRESTED BUT FREED

Mrs. Berckmans, Who Has Had Unusual Career, Thinks Woman in "400" Is Jealous of Her.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Owing to the receipt of three threatening letters in the last few days, Mrs. Gustave Bruce Berckmans, whose name has figured prominently recently in society newspapers, caused the arrest last night of Frederick Koenig. He is a friend of a block away from her house. Mrs. Berckmans said she thought the prisoner was the man who had been shadowing her home for a week or more, but could not be certain of his identity. As no one could identify the man, he was released.

When Mrs. Berckmans appealed to the police for protection, she said that she was in great fear that some bodily harm would be done to her, and based her fears on the three letters that had been sent to her anonymously.

"All of the letters were signed 'A Neighbor,'" said Mrs. Berckmans. "In the first was told that all of the valuable diamonds were to be stolen, but this was nothing compared with the second letter. Its contents are too horrible to discuss."

"Unless I am mistaken these letters were written by a woman who cuts a big figure in society. I do not care to name her name until I am absolutely certain of her identity, but when that time comes I shall certainly do so."

Wishes They Would

Keep Husbands at Home

"For my part, I sincerely wish these jealous women would keep their husbands at home and not give me all this annoyance. My photograph appeared in a society paper a few weeks ago and I am inclined to the belief that that had something to do with inciting this jealousy on the part of this woman. I wore all of my fine jewels when I posed for the photograph, but may have had something to do with it, too."

The real truth of the matter is, I believe, this man, who has been hanging around me, is a private detective employed by some one. He is doubtless in the employ of the same person who sent the threatening letters."

Mrs. Berckmans is probably 35 years old, but wears her years so well that one might easily mistake her for five or six years younger. Her taste in dress is simple, but she wears costly jewels wherever she may be going. Her diamonds alone are worth a fortune, while her other jewels can hardly be surpassed in all New York.

Strangely enough, it is said, that at the time of her marriage a few years ago she was so averse to wearing jewels that she would not even display her engagement ring.

Remarkable Change

in Their Surroundings.

Mrs. Berckmans' husband, up to the time of his death, a little more than a year ago, was in the employ of Tiffany & Co., chiefly as a purchasing agent. From a modest home, they suddenly took possession of a fine residence that cost $100,000—the house still occupied by Mrs. Berckmans. It was during the time that she had developed a taste for handsome diamonds and pearls.

Mrs. Berckmans died abroad of typhoid fever. She fell ill in Paris, but was taken to London, where his wife met him. After his death she brought the body home for burial, but was too ill to attend the funeral.

Mrs. Berckmans probably acquired the title to the beautiful white stone house when she occupied it on Dec. 2, 1899, the transfer being made to her by Alonso B. Knight for the "consideration of $100." There is a mortgage on the property for $70,000.

HOW TO BE A TWINKLY GIRL

It Is All in the Twinkly Eye and Any Girl Can Have a Twinkly Eye

Are you a girl with a twinkly eye? Because, if you are, there'll be something about you in the new Woman's Magazine, out next Sunday with the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

And if you are not a girl with a twinkly eye, you can be one.

It is a matter of "muscular manipulation."

At least, a man who has been studying women's eyes says so.

And if the twinkly eye is not the eye for which you sigh, there are others you can have, if you try.

You may have a coquettish eye, a dreamy eye, a frank eye, an eye full of "soul," or the sub-zero eye of the Gibson girl, who is getting knocked up hard just now.

This Gibson eye has been the fashion for a while, and the coquettish eye is not in with a girl with a twinkly eye.

Her dance program is always full and she has to turn down a few callers every night to keep from overcrowding the parlor.

How to be a twinkly girl will be told in the new magazine.

CUPID HIDES IN DRY GOODS

Four Marriages in Two Months Result of His Strategy in East St. Louis

Cupid has been very busy in a big dry goods store in East St. Louis during the last two months, and that there are four young people employed there have been married.

The last of the quartet is Cleveland C. Molla, the 19-year-old son of C. C. Molla, a prominent St. Louis citizen. His bride is Miss Annie Corrigan, 17 years old. The ceremony was performed by Father Swersky of the Patrick Church, and the full consent of the bridegroom's father, but much to the surprise of his sister and his mother, was obtained.

The three who preceded Molla into matrimony were young ladies. Miss Maud Haney married Clarence Coker two weeks ago, and Miss Anna Corrigan, Miss Mollie's twin, married Charles Cook, and just about two months ago Miss Clara Thompson married Felix Ambroster.

New Serum From Horses

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—It has been learned that the new typhoid serum in use at Beth Israel Hospital, this city, where Dr. Jesse of the hospital is being treated, is prepared by immunizing horses, just as that for diphtheria is manufactured. The serum is made by Dr. Jesse of Beth Israel Hospital, and sent by him to a staff physician of the hospital.

BARROWS RELEASED.

Judge Refused to Hold Him on Mrs. Fowler's Testimony

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOUNT STERLING, Ill., Dec. 18.—Arthur Barrows was released from custody yesterday. Justice Ranney refusing to hold him on his guilty plea on the testimony of Mrs. Martin Fowler, who said he had hired her to make an assault upon Mrs. Mary Barrows, his stepmother.

Mrs. Fowler was carried into court upon a cot and repeated to the justice various things told in her confession of how she happened to use the hatchet upon Mrs.

Barrows. Mrs. Fowler told that Barrows had been threatening her on different occasions about "putting her relatives out of the way." Twice, she said he brought her poison which he wanted her to administer.

Mr. Barrows, who is 30, last Friday swore that on Nov. 26, last, Barrows brought her a hatchet and outlined a plan to him to get rid of his wife.

Barrows is accused of giving Mrs. Fowler a drug, which she says was to serve her to do the work. It is believed that Mrs. Fowler is insane.

of the several competitive plans submitted for the new customhouse and subtreasury buildings in San Francisco, selected St. Louis plan by the firm of St. Louis, Mo. The firm will receive 5 per cent of the total amount to be expended, which is $1,500,000.

DR. BULL'S COUGH SYRUP

"THE ONE THAT CURES."

There is no case of throat or lung trouble which Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will not cure. It is the only absolutely sure and safe cure for cough, cold, hoarseness, bronchitis, influenza, croup, whooping cough, bleeding lungs or hemorrhages and consumption.

Dr. John W. Bull, who discovered Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup fifty years ago, was the most successful doctor for all throat and lung diseases the world has ever known. No other doctor has ever been able to devise a better formula.

Cures

"My little boy three years old caught the croup and I tried Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and he was soon relieved after a few doses and entirely cured of the croup and bronchial trouble after taking one bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. When I have this old reliable remedy in the house I feel safe about my family's health."—Mrs. Mary O'Connor, 339 Clinton St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I use none other but Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. It has been used in our family for many years and I would not be without it in the house." Ernest E. Curry, N. J. State Hospital, Morris Plains, N. J.

Coughs and Colds

"I have used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup for the last fifteen years, and it is my best friend when I have a cough or cold; there is no other." Mrs. Charles D. Jordan, 508 Webster Ave., Chicago, Ill.

"I can safely recommend Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup because it has given entire satisfaction and I cheerfully advise its use to all who may be suffering with colds and cough." Miss Celia Murphy, 332 Calhoun St., New Orleans, La.

AVOID SUBSTITUTES

There is no remedy "just as good" as Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Don't let a dealer influence you into buying some cheap substitute when your health or the health of some member of your family is at stake. Be thrifty of your money. The genuine Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has our "Bull's Head" trade-mark on the wrapper. At all drugstores, price 25c, 50c and $1.00.

NO NEW CHARGE AGAINST BARLOW

The State Department Has Had No Recent Complaint About the Consul to Mexico

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The state department has received no charges against Andrew D. Barlow of St. Louis, now consul general to Mexico. Charges were filed against him three years ago, but the department could not substantiate them. They involve personal conduct, but no explanation is given as to the exact character. They were not taken seriously at that time.

If this had been misconduct sufficient to force Mr. Barlow to retire from an amateur club in the City of Mexico, he will be compelled to retire from the consular service.

The department insists upon its representatives having the very highest standing in the communities where they do public service, and in this case the standing, for causes not political, is considered unnecessary for the department to stand so closely into character.

The point is that the charges his usefulness when he loses standing, and if the man is not altogether responsible for losing his standing, the department feels that it makes no difference.

The department denies any knowledge of the charges against Barlow at that time.

The only thing known here is what was contained in a press telegram from the City of Mexico which says that Barlow has returned to Mexico.

In their distraction the police of the city and that he chose this course rather than meet charges made against him to the board of managers.

YOUR MONEY RETURNED.

If Hyomei Does Not Cure You of Cataract, Say Judge & Dolph, 515 Olive St.

In advertising that they will refund the money to any one purchasing a Hyomei outfit who can say that it has done them no good in the treatment of cataract, Judge & Dolph mean exactly what the guarantees.

Of course the percentage of cures by Hyomei is nearly one hundred or else we could not afford to make this unusual offer. But if the treatment should not be adapted to your case there will be no questions or quibblings when you go to get your money.

That the beginning of cataract is due to the presence of germs in the air passages is now admitted by every physician. It stands to reason that cataract cannot be cured unless these germs are first destroyed. The Hyomei treatment kills the cataract germs even in the minutest air cells, soothes and heals the irritated mucous membrane and makes complete and lasting cures in cases that have resisted the usual methods of treatment.

Cataract cannot be cured by medicines administered through the stomach. Hyomei is the only natural method, and it has made cures that seem miraculous. The complete outfit costs but $1.00 and consists of an inhaler, which will last a lifetime, and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks' treatment. Additional bottles of Hyomei can be procured for 50¢.

Judge & Dolph give their personal guarantee with every Hyomei outfit they sell to refund the money if it does not cure. There is no risk whatever to the purchaser of Hyomei.

Ernest Gabler and Brother, thorough-going Germans, and heirs to generations of musical instinct and traditions, did not have to feel for popular favor when they began to make pianos. Success was theirs from the start, decades ago.

The Gabler Piano

Ranks as one of the three or four makes of highest standing in the United States, a country where piano factories are counted by many scores. But while the makers of other high-grade pianos have raised their selling price, Gabler & Brother have continued to quote their instruments at the lowest price consistent with first-class work.

That is the reason there are 6500 Gablers in St. Louis today, and should also be an incentive to investigation on your part. We have the Gablers in several handsome case styles, and in oak, walnut and mahogany finish.

HOW BEER BECAME POPULAR IN CHINA

Commissioner Wong Tells Advertising Men of Remarkable Effect of Alluring Posters

PRAISE FOR POST-DISPATCH

Artistic Possibilities of Daily Newspaper Advertisements Are Discussed at Banquet

Beginning his talk before the Advertising Men's League at the first annual banquet in the elegantly Dutch room of the Hamilton Hotel, Vice Commissioner Wong of China thus explained a "graverance" against American advertising:

"All of you appreciate the interest that every loyal Chinaman must have in the matters pertaining to Manchuria at present. I saw a very interesting article on that line the other day. It was headed 'The Walls of Pekin.' Of course my attention was attracted; then my interest was aroused. The telephone, bells in the house were ringing, my wife was calling, and my son was kicking a football in the parlor. But I could not put down the paper. I read with growing interest—until I found that the 'Walls of Pekin' were like the walls of the human system, and that a certain breed of bulls was the only thing that would keep them in proper repair. I did not know whether to admire or swear; I leave that question to you."

The audience voted that he should admire.

Mr. Wong's subject was "Advertising in China." He declared the bill posting advertiser made his appearance in China fully 2500 years ago, by posting his advertisements beside the official proclamations, but that only in the past 10 years had there been any progress in newspaper advertising in China. But even yet, he said, there was no attractiveness about the Chinese newspaper advertising, except as it related to patent medicines, pills and American can beer.

"Any Chinaman reading patent medicine advertisements in Chinese newspapers is bound to become sick," he declared. "The best advertisements are even more impressive. Being flaming beer advertisements are shown reproductions of Roman circus scenes, with last number of ladies who have evidently been boycotted by the tailors to judge from the scantiness of their attire.

Drink Beer and See Ladies

The Chinese readers learn that these posters go with the beer; and they get the opinion that they may have a real view of the ladies and other scenes through drinking the beer.

"The result is that advertising has made the Chinese a great beer-drinking nation. Whether any considerable number have found the expected visions of the Roman ladies is, of course, something that I cannot tell."

"The second advertising custom in China is for the display of hats. Certain elements of our population have great faith that if they advertise bad hats for sale, grats, they will be instantly cured."

"Slowly but surely beer has become popular in China. The merchants argue that if they put things in their show windows, passers-by will probably see something they do not want, and will not enter. And there, after a prospective customer has entered, there have a different way of applying the faculty of intuition. You call it a process of observation. Your salesman will judge from the manner and dress of the interesting person what he may want; the Chinese salesman will look into the street. If his customer came on foot, the price will be low; if he came in a wheelchair, price will be high; and if he came in a chair attended by various servants, the price will be higher, and if he came in a chair attended by various servants, he will have to pay the highest price. The system may not be so scientific, but it is infallible."

Post-Dispatch

Achievement Praised

"You scientific advertising men may yet have your day in China. Our mines are undeveloped, our railroads are small, our commerce is in its infancy. But in 10 years our foreign commerce has increased 500 per cent. In the next few years I hope to see the great army of American merchants invading China, with their advertising men as the vanguard. With your ability and your great love of exaggerated trade, you will not be long in getting influence, but will monopolize the whole field. I hope that before many years I shall invite the Advertising Men's League to a banquet in my honor."

John L. Whelan, toastmaster, in introducing the first speaker, George S. John of the Post-Dispatch, referred to the immensity of the Post-Dispatch and its veracity as a positive proof of the enterprise of St. Louis advertisers. He declared that each copy of the paper cost the publishers 10 cents to print and that the possibility of distributing such an immense edition at the regular price was a remarkable achievement. He referred to the 160 pages and 60 columns of paid advertising as a record-breaking achievement, and praised the attractiveness and completeness of the paper.

Mr. Johns, conceding that the advertisers had made it possible for the Post-Dispatch to produce the greatest newspaper ever printed, argued that there was much for advertising men to do in developing the esthetic side of the advertisement.

"In producing a newspaper," he said, "it is not necessary to have the paper to have it first, to present it attractively, make a vigorous and independent paper, but it is necessary to have the general appearance of the paper attractive."

The way to catch attention is to please, and advertisers should join with the other forces of a paper to make it attractive, to impress the mind of the buyer and the attraction of attention, the creation of interest, the expression of desire and the resolve to purchase it.

Other speakers were William F. Depp, who told "The Features of Railroad Advertising," and Fred W. W. F. Sheldon, who discussed "The Ethics of Advertising."

At the suggestion of Secretary Orr, every member of the league contributed to the Post-Dispatch Christmas Fund.

WOMAN DIES IN FIRE; ONE JUMPS

Morning Blaze on North Twenty-Third Street Takes Occupants of Dwelling by Surprise

ALL ESCAPE IS CUT OFF

Workmen Rescue One Woman From Room With Flames All Around Her

Esther St. Clair was burned to death in her bed in a fire which destroyed the three-story house at 611 North Twenty-third street at 8:30 Friday morning.

Ray Belmont jumped thirty feet from a window in the rear of the second floor upon the ice-covered brick paving, and was injured.

Maud Lester, asleep in the front room on the second floor, was rescued by workmen, who put a ladder to her window and carried her to the ground.

Two other women, Daisy St. Clair and Golden Bond, escaped without injury.

The house was entirely wrecked. The fire started under the stairway in the basement, and, following the stairway as a flue, shut off that avenue of escape.

The origin of the fire is not definitely known, as gas meters were located near the place where the blaze started, and firemen believe escaping gas became ignited.

ALL WERE ASLEEP

All the women were asleep in their rooms when the fire was discovered by a servant, Mrs. Lester was ill in her room, at the front of the second door. Esther St. Clair's room was near the center of the second floor. Ray Belmont was at the rear on the same floor.

Before any of the women could be aroused, the entire stairway was blazing, while great volumes of smoke rolled upward.

Across the street, at the corner of Lucas avenue and Twenty-third street, workmen were repairing a building. They saw the smoke and heard the cries, and several of them carried a ladder to the front of the house, which projects to the sidewalk.

The ladder was put against Mrs. Lester's window, and the workmen climbed up and found the woman distracted and almost ready to throw herself into the flames. They carried her to the street and to a neighboring house.

LEAPS ON HARD ICE

Ray Belmont, when she found that the stairway was closed to her, sprang barefooted from the window ledge. She fell on the ice pavement and her hip was badly bruised and her ankle sprained. Internal injuries are also feared.

Daisy St. Clair and Golden Bond were taken down by ladders.

After the fire had been subdued it was found that Esther St. Clair was missing. Firemen hurried to her room and found her charred body in her bed.

VINEER FAILS TO APPEAR

Authorities Think That Man Accused by Girls Has Fled From the City

Thomas A. Vineer, formerly proprietor of "The Autocrat," a men's association, with offices at Sixty-first street, is believed to have fled the city to escape prosecution on the charges brought against him by two young girls who accused him of being a stenographer in answer to advertisements he had inserted in the newspapers.

In the Dayton street police court, Fireman, who is now in custody, was tortured for his failure to appear for trial. Patrick J. Manley, a saloon keeper at Nineteenth and Chestnut streets, who furnished the girls with money until Jan. 18, is to bring Vineer into court or pay into court $100.

Vineer was arrested Nov. 25 on charges filed by Louise Porter, 17 years old, of 1614 Olive street, and Anna Wachtel, 16 years old, of 2625 Indiana avenue. The girls claimed that when they visited Vineer's office to apply for positions he locked them in his private office and addressed them in intimate language.

The cases were adjourned by the First District police court on Nov. 27. Vineer secured a change of venue to the Dayton street police court, where he was held for weeks ago. Vineer asked for separate trials and a jury in each. This was granted. The Wachtel case was set for Dec. 15 and the Porter case for Dec. 18. At the call of each case Vineer has failed to appear. The court attaches no report that he cannot be found, and that at 234 Olive street, where he lived, nothing is known of his present whereabouts.

SAY THEIR TOWN WAS DRY.

Four Citizens of Henderson's Mound Are United States Prisoners

Alfred Henderson's Mound, New Madrid County, Missouri, a town of twenty-five hundred inhabitants, according to testimony before the United States District Court, went out to celebrate the other night and the hilarity continued over a period of three days.

A cooperative company is the chief industry there, and the town is concerned, who, when they learned how the little Missouri village had misbehaved, were deeply grieved.

"Impossible!" exclaimed the manager when apprised that more than ten barrels of whisky were at the disposal of the Henderson men. But he was soon convinced to the contrary and his information led to a speedy investigation.

"The town got too dry," declared one of the prisoners, "and we thought we could make things hum if we got our little gin mill working."

Now Henderson Mound's four citizens are facing heavy punishment.

AID FOR LITTLE MESSENGER.

Martin Miller, Injured by Street Car, Finds Many Friends

Public interest in the welfare of Martin Miller, the 10-year-old messenger boy who fell under a street car and suffered the loss of his right foot, continues, and contributions to his fund for assistance are being received at the Post-Dispatch almost daily. This paper yesterday sent $100 to the child at St. John's Hospital, St. Louis, contributing $37 to the fund. The boy, now employed in the fifth floor notation department of the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co., and 50 cents by "One in Sympathy."

The little boy is very thankful to all who have been so kind to him. Their love and sympathy mean so much to the child, and the mother of whom he has been the principal support. Martin still suffers from the effects of his injury. A change of climate is now past, but he will be confined to the hospital for several weeks yet, which will be a sad day for the little fellow.

Strikers Will Haul for Theaters

As a proof that its strike is directed only against the St. Louis Transfer Co., the Amalgamated Teamsters' Union has agreed to have all busses and teams necessary for theatrical companies now showing in St. Louis promptly after Saturday night's performance when they are to leave town.

FRYE A HAWES' SUPPORTER

Police Commissioner William G. Frye, who, unless all signs fail, will be elected president of the Board of Police Commissioners to succeed Harry B. Hawes, announces his support of Mr. Hawes in the latter's candidacy for the Democratic nomination.

At its meeting Friday afternoon the police board will elect Mr. Hawes' successor. Robert D. Dockery, who has been appointed by Gov. Dockery to the vacancy on the board, is receiving hearty congratulations from friends throughout the state. The employer of the Hibernian Milling Co. presented him with floral tributes and testimonials of their esteem.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. Dec. 18.—

Judge Graves this morning in the circuit court set the cases of Senator B. L. Matthews for trial on March 25, 1904. This is the order of the cases: according to the agreement of the attorneys when they were first called, the cases should follow the cases of Senators Faubion and Smith. These are set for March 21 and 22, respectively, and in the Matthews case follows on March 25. Attorney John W. Booth for Matthews is not going to trial. Assistant Attorney General Sam B. Jenkins asked that the agreement be carried out and that this case should follow the other cases. Judge Graves sustained the agreement and set the case as stated above.

A SALE OF Men's Finest Overcoats.

By Finest We Mean the Very Best Overcoats That Are Produced Anywhere in the United States.

They're the proud products of the cleverest and most skilled tailoring talent in the country and can only be compared to highest class custom made garments. The unprecedented demand for them in November prompted our buyer to duplicate many of the lines. We overestimated the demand for December and now find ourselves somewhat overstocked on these high-grade Overcoats. They're made of excellent Viscous, Imported Kersseys, Cheviots, Montagnacs and Elysian Beavers—in the medium or long styles, also the swell "Paletots"—solid blacks, Oxford grays and neat fancy overplaids—some silk lined—hand-tailored throughout, reflecting the uppermost attainments of modern tailoring ingenuity.

We've grouped them in two lots, have radically reduced the price and inaugurate a special five days' sale, commencing tomorrow and ending Christmas eve. Critical dressers, who are custom-tailor enthusiasts, are particularly requested to inspect these truly elegant garments and these remarkable Overcoat values.

The Post-Dispatch Daily Story.

Concerning Ephriam's Nose.

BY HARRIET G. CANFIELD.

(Copyright, 1903, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)
EPHRIAM JAMES had been "keepin' company" with pretty Sally Branson for three years—ever since she was 16, and that was a long time—at Kyte's Corners.

"There's nothin' to hinder your gittin' married," her father mildly remarked on several occasions, and her Aunt Eliza said very plainly that she considered "sich dilly-dallyin' a tempin' of Providence. It's as plain as the nose on your face," she exclaimed, "that you care for him plenty!" When Sally blushed profusely, for it was "the nose on" Eph's "face" that obscured her vision of happiness.

Such a little thing as Eph's nose! Ah, that was it! It was too little! Sally acknowledged it to no one but herself, but the small nose affixed to her lover's otherwise massive countenance was a sore trial to her.

She was quite willing to marry Eph, but not his nose. "Just think of sitting opposite it at table all my life!" she said to herself, with a sigh. "But I love him—I love him more every day; maybe if he'll wait long enough, I think so much of him that I shan't mind his nose."

But Ephriam thought that he had waited long enough. "When you come home from your visit," he said to her, on the eve of her departure for Greytown, "I'll expect you to say when, Sally."

At Kyte's Corners they did not "name the day"—they "said when!"

"You've kept me waitin' quite a spell, dear," he continued, in his slow way, "and I'm gettin' anxious to have you say when, so that we can send out the invites pretty soon. I know I ain't good enough for you, Sally, but I'll—"

"Oh, Eph!" she cried, remorsefully, her eyes full of tears. "You're too good! I'm a horrid, selfish little wretch, and—"

Ephriam had to guess at the conclusion of her sentence, for "All aboard!" rang out, and he was forced to say goodbye and leave her occupying a seat with a commercial traveler—a little man with so much nose that, as Sally said to herself: "He could have given Eph half of it and had plenty left."

In Graytown Sally found much to interest and delight her. A visit with her cousins was always a great treat, and the little country girl was a welcome guest. With shopping and card parties and "comin' outs" the days were pleasure-filled. It was all very delightful and quite different from her monotonous life at the Corners, but Sally sometimes longed for Eph—nose and all.

At the end of the second week of her visit she was a very homesick young woman, and it was with a noticeable lack of enthusiasm that she consented to accompany her cousin to an evening lecture. It was a lecture given in the employes of a society recently formed, "For the Study of the Influence of the Mind Upon the Body." The subject of the lecture was "Growth." The lecturer was a thin, little man—evidently so from choice, for, in his opening remarks he emphatically stated that "We all may be what we wish to be, physically."

The bored expression faded from Sally's face at his words and she sat up very straight. She was thinking of Eph and his nose! A look of joy shone in her blue eyes when the lecturer went on to say "I could change your size or shape or the size or shape of any feature, I am here to tell you how."

Sally hungered for the little man's next words, but was forced to wait while he unbuttoned his coat, and drew a small and mysterious-looking volume from an inner pocket.

"In this little book," he said, impressively, "are compactly given all the rules for the determination of growth. The volume may be had at the close of the lecture for the small sum of $1."

Sally sighed with impatience. Must she wait so long? But no, he was saying something else! She leaned forward and listened intently while he gave forth enough general information to create a decided interest in the specific directions which he continually reminded them were to be found in the little book.

"Whenever you take any food," he said, "think intently of that part of your body which you wish to nourish; then expect it to grow, and it will surely grow! You can think growth to yourself and—more than that—to your friends! But the majority of people lack concentration, and my book informs them how to concentrate their minds on the object."

Sally listened very attentively to the remainder of the lecture, and was among the first to purchase the much-lauded book, though it seemed unnecessary to do so, for it seemed to be a concentrated object—one little object—here.

The next morning she said goodbye to her cousins, and hastened home as fast as steam could carry her, to begin operations on the unsuspecting Ephriam.

Now, Ephriam was "reg'lar at his meals," as his mother often averred, and Sally could "think intently" of his nose three times a day, secure in her knowledge that at those times he would be "taking nourishment," as the lecturer had said.

Several days went by, before there was any change in her lover's appearance, and every day Eph pleaded in vain for her to "say when."

On the evening of the fourth day, to Sally's joy, a good-sized lump appeared at the extreme end of the object under "concentration." It did not add greatly to Eph's beauty, to be sure; but it was a beginning, and Sally had no doubt that, when he came again, the growth would be more evenly distributed.

Alas for her hopes. The next time that he called the lump was larger, and—horror of horrors—it was an angry red.

"Oh!" she cried, remorsefully. "What have I done to you, Eph?" Her frightened eyes were on his nose, and Ephriam stared at her in bewilderment.

"Done to me?" he said. "Why, you ain't done nothin', Sally. I've just got a boil. It's a pretty bad one, but you needn't be scared, little girl!" Then his mind widened into a broad smile. "Why, you just give me a sight of me, to worry on," he said, gratefully.

He bent to kiss her, and Sally threw her arms around his neck. "O, Eph!" she sobbed. "I do think a sight of you; that's just it, dear. I've been thinking too much! But I won't any more, Eph—I won't any more!"

Ephriam looked bewildered at this, but not at all unhappy, for "actions speak louder than words," and Sally's arms were around his neck, and Sally's lips were well, they were evidently ready to "say when."

The Man With the Sun-Burnt Heart

By Nixola Greeley-Smith.

OFF the girl you thought you were in love with bore you?

Do you find her less pretty than you thought her, not so charming as you fancied her to be?

Is the light of her eyes dimmed and the glory of her countenance shadowed by the memory of seashore nymph or summer siren, brief heroines of vacation idyls that you thought forgotten?

If so, you have it—the most intangible, most tormenting of afflictions, the sunburned heart.

When you went away last summer to the mountains the memory of your best girl was enshrined in your thoughts as sweetly as her latest photograph was packed in your suit-case.

And the first days you spent at the hotel you remarked the young women guests merely to reflect with satisfaction upon the superior attractions of the girl you had left behind you.

In a few days, to be sure, you had grown quite chummy with the Vassar girl whose mother always made room for you cordially when you approached her circle on the plaza.

You had learned that she looked well playing tennis, better in a boat and best of all in the billowy evening dress which she wore when you said—

"Heavens! Surely she understood that you didn't mean anything by that.

Then there was the morning you took the walk out to the old mill. That was the most serious of all—for things said in broad daylight have a faculty of getting themselves taken seriously, and of being remembered afterwards.

It was the day she was going away, however, and, of course, you had to say something ardent. It was very evident that she expected.

What a pretty girl she was—not so pretty, of course, as Molly, your best girl, and yet—what a taking little way she had about her.

No wonder that good, practical, sensible Molly seems by contrast—yes, positively dull.

You never remembered till now that you promised to write to that other girl—and you must do it, too—poor little thing. She has probably been crying her eyes out over you.

Strange, though, that it should all come back to you after these months, and that you, smart, burned by the mid-August sun which you watched together, should come with a vague longing at the recollection.

HEARD IN THE MUSEUM.

"Doesn't it make you vain to be so stuck-up?" asked the bearded lady.

"On your whiskers," the human.
